

Traveling with students is a wonderful way to get to know them in new settings, introduce them to new locations and situations, and contribute to their learning. However, it also carries additional responsibilities.

Preparation for the Trip

- 1) Make all travel arrangements, adhering to the established district and college travel rules and regulations.
- 2) Hold an orientation meeting for all students to explain the program and expectations. Discuss also with the students what is appropriate dress for the various functions and/or host institution.
- 3) Discuss the behavioral contract and secure student signatures.
- 4) Have the students complete the required travel forms.
- 5) Give students written information about the transportation, hotels, etc. so they can leave that information with their families.
- 6) Have the students complete the emergency form to take with you on the trip along with a copy of the student itinerary form.
- 7) If students are missing classes, have them complete the Official Absence Excuse form before they leave on the trip.
- 8) After arriving at the site, review emergency procedures with students and give them information for contacting you at all times, i.e., room number and/or cell number. In addition, collect the room and cell phone numbers of the students so you can contact them if needed.
- 9) Attend scheduled activities and be present for students for the duration of the trip.

Personal Behavior

Because you are responsible for the safety and well-being of all the students for the total college-sponsored trip, you should also abide by the rules and responsibilities listed on the student behavioral contract. This includes the restriction on the use of alcohol and/or non-prescription drugs for the duration of the trip, monitoring student behavior, and modeling appropriate behavior.

I have read the above provisions and agree to abide by them.
